CARROLLTON, Texas, Oct. 13 /PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- The 2009 ONESOURCE User Conference for Corporate & Trust Tax Professionals will give attendees the tools they need to react to pressures in today's business environment. Staff challenges, regulatory changes and increased pressure on expenses mean tax professionals must deliver value like never before.

"Due to uncertainties in the overall economy, professionals from the tax, accounting, and trust arenas continue to feel pressure to look for ways to operate more efficiently," said Brian Peccarelli, president of Corporate Software & Services at the Tax & Accounting business of Thomson Reuters. "With regulations continuing to change and increasing in complexity, they also need to be experts in finance-related laws to confidently manage risk of non-compliance."

The 2009 ONESOURCE User Conference is the premier event for corporate tax and trust users and promises to be the largest and most instructive of its kind, added Peccarelli. Packed with regulation updates, best practices, and software tips, the conference will gather nearly 1,000 professionals in Miami Beach, Fla., from Oct. 18-21.

Attendees will choose from among hundreds of learning sessions under 11 specialty tracks including: Checkpoint, ONESOURCE Corporate Workflow Tools, Mastering Microsoft® Excel, Domestic Income Tax Compliance, International Income Tax Compliance, Property Tax, Tax Provision, Sales & Use Tax, Transfer Pricing, and Trust Tax. There will also be plenty of networking activities where professionals can interact with industry colleagues.

Participants can earn up to 19 hours of Continuing Professional Education (CPE) credits by attending the education sessions. They will hear from many of the industry's leading experts on recent regulatory changes and industry trends as well as from Thomson Reuters software experts.
